LOGLINE

When a disillusioned crack dealer is approached by a young boy with his own intentions of entering the drug game, he must deflect the boy's misplaced zeal as he attempts to take him home.

director ROBERT BROGDEN

Robert Brogden is a filmmaker from Kansas City, currently working in Denver, CO while taking classes at the Colorado Film School.

The son of interracial parents, his work provides a unique perspective on race and class in America. Specifically, DEAL addresses the self-defeating nature of the life of a drug dealer, while also exploring the tragedy of a life left with no other option.

MARCUS SCOTT as RASHAD

Marcus is an actor from Detroit, MI taking classes at the Colorado Film School. He has been attached to DEAL from the beginning, playing Rashad for well over 8 months in camera testings, rehearsals, as well as the finished product. For his efforts, he was awarded Best Actor at the school's Fall 2017 Student Show.

OWEN ZITEK as ASHTON

Owen is a stage actor from Denver, CO making his on-screen debut in DEAL. The film was a positive experience for Owen, who was excited to work with a challenging character and wonderful cast and crew.

producer KELLEY ZINCONE

Kelley is a creative producer and writer based out of Denver, CO. Inspired by her own lack of role models within the the LGBTQ community, and reminiscent of her years growing up in Baltimore, Cincinnati, and North Las Vegas, Kelley was interested in the project because of it's authentic depiction of racial and economic disparity.

production designer JAKE LEININGER

Jake is a production designer from Fort Collins, CO. He attends the Colorado Film School, where he also studies writing and producing.

director of photography ALEXANDRA OLIVERA

Alexandra is a cinematography major attending Colorado Film School who has spent most of her life between New York, Mexico, and Alaska. Her devotion to minority-centric stories is what initially attracted her to the project, along with Robert's enthusiasm for creative visuals and motivation to build a team of passionate filmmakers.
